First research the product creator then get an idea about any past products and how they were received. Did they sell well? Do quick reviews of them and put in links, people may buy them if their good.

Bonus creation is one of the best skills you can learn. Good articles, helpful software and personal time are great bonuses. Check the normal area's for freelancers if you want to source it out and also get a WordPress plugin built for a few hundred bucks.

Just make sure it compliments the product and is relevant. So you will build a review base article on a blog (when I did this I just kept using the same blog because in my eyes it was a waste of time to continually put up new blogs).

If you can't get a hold of a review copy just wait until about 3-4 days before the launch and those who did get copies should have the reviews up already. Simply read a few articles and come to your own conclusion about it.

LAUNCH JACKING SECRETS

Now let's talk about video which will be your most powerful way of getting in front of people. You want to basically take some screenshots and switch up your article a bit and simply give your review.

Post it up with all the proper title and meta tags then add your affiliate links. From here I go to fiverr and buy some links.

So now here comes launch day and every one is excited and sending links to their lists. You will do another review but this time it will be LIVE!

Start a google hangout and basically go over your review again and talk about your bonuses.

In my experience I have been ranked during the launch day simply because I was live!
